She Needed a Rest

Mrs. Brown Was on the Verge of Nervous Prostration.

"What did he say is the matter with you?" anxiously asked Mr. Brown.

He had waited in a taxicab in front of Dr. Murray's house, while Mrs. Brown received medical advice.

Mrs. Brown sighed, leaned weakly against him and murmured that she'd tell him as soon as he had finished directing the chauffeur.

"It's a wonder I'm not in a hospital right now, he says," she continued. "I have missed nervous prostration by a hair's breadth, and if I'm not very, very careful, I'll get it yet. Perhaps I'll die, too."

A sob left her. "People are dying like everything this spring," she resumed with emotion, "from the same thing."

"Well, then, now, by hokey, p'raps you'll quit juggling trunks and lifting bookcases to look for a nickel that's slid under 'em, and act like a woman with at least an ounce of sense!" said Mr. Brown, excitedly.

"Lemme get out at a subway station," said Mr. Brown, "and you go home and get to bed. And stick there. Don't cry like that, Pussy. I'm only repeating what I've said before. You mustn't do so much."

It was 10 a. m. "I'll just stop at the butcher's and have it out with him about those unspeakably scrawny chickens he sent," she decided, "and that's the only job I shall do."

After a long argument with the butcher she returned home.

"Dr. Murray ordered absolute quiet for me, Bessie," she informed her maid, "so I shall lie down all day. I guess he's right. I need rest. We women go on until we drop. Men stop if they have a pain in their little finger."

"And they got very little sympathy for females," said Bessie, dejectedly.

All the Gold IN GEORGIA Could not Buy-

Riding, Ga. August 27, 1906.
Messrs. E. G. Dwyer & Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:- In 1897 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. Some physicians told me it was Dyspepsia, some Consumption of the Lungs, others said consumption of the Bowels. One physician said I would not live until Spring, and for four long years I existed on a little boiled milk, soda biscuits, doctors' prescriptions and Dyspepsia remedies that costed the market. I could not digest anything I ate, and in the Spring of 1901 I picked up one of your Almanacs as a poor consolation. Dyspepsia was on my mind, and I read that ALL THE GOLD IN GEORGIA COULD NOT BUY. I kept on taking it and in two months I went back to my work, as a machinist, and in three months I was well and hearty. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic.

May you live long and prosper.

Yours very truly,
G. M. CORNELL.

"Little they realize how we feel." "They couldn't go through, with what we do and never even mention, because we're accustomed to being wretched," continued Mrs. Brown.

"They wouldn't understand, anyway," said Bessie, with angry resentment. Twenty minutes after she had retired to her room Bessie appeared to report that the top of the shower bath had fallen.

"I hardly teched it," said she, "an' off it come. It's the thing with holes, what the water spurts out."

Mrs. Brown remained still three minutes. Then she arose and went to look for herself.

"It's come unsoldered," she said; "get the hammer and some string. I'll stand on the edge of the bath and fix it."

Half an hour's toil put the shower bath in good shape. (Mr. Brown was paying the janitor of their house three dollars a month to do odd jobs.)

"Good land, look how paint was dripped on the outside of the tub!" exclaimed Mrs. Brown.

She procured a sharp knife, some turpentine, and a cloth. After spending 45 minutes, with her back bent and her head swimming, she straightened and viewed the result.

"I've been meaning to take that paint off for weeks," she remarked. Of course, it don't show, still I knew it was there, and I cannot bear not to have a house as it should be. Now, I'll rest all the afternoon, and you can bring a cup of tea to me."

In ten minutes the tea was at her bedside. One sip, and Mrs. Brown discovered that the grocer had sent orange pokes instead of English breakfast. She tumbled into a dressing gown and rushed to the telephone, whence, exhausted but triumphant after scolding somebody hotly, she returned to bed, bearing a fashion magazine.

"O, goody, panels are coming in!" she exclaimed. "I can change my Nile green by using a net overskirt and the cream applique from my old satin, and the panel and sleeves can be of this all-over lace I bought nine years ago. I was sure it would be handy for something. It's in the steamer trunk, under the four big ones, in the spare room. Or it is in the box with the hat trimmings. I put it away in the fall of 1899, when I went to Europe—yes, it's the steamer. Bessie! Come and help me."

The two, each weighing about 115, sallied resolutely to the trunk-room. With apparent ease (how often had they gone through with a similar performance) they brought a tier of trunks to the floor and knelt beside the steamer.

Bessie went back to her ironing, while Mrs. Brown sat on the floor and cut out the new panel. Next she ripped the Nile-green gown and basted the panel in place.

Glancing up, she noted that the careless hand of Mr. Brown had put books belonging to various sets in the wrong shelves of the bookcase. It was a good time to remove all the books, and change them from case to case, in order to make the room look different.

Mr. Brown's key sounded in the outer door as she locked the last bookcase. Mrs. Brown bounded to her room and into bed. She was lying faint and white, as he softly entered.

"How's father's little girlie?" he queried, tenderly stroking her feverish forehead.

Mrs. Brown gave a weary moan. "I just feel as if I didn't have a bit of strength left in my whole body," said she.

His Occupation. A big, brawny fellow, in answer to a question in a justice court as to what he did for a living, said: "Well, sir, in the spring I ketches an' sells young mockin' birds; in the summer I mostly sells rattlesnake buttons fer rattles for the babies, but in the winter I sometimes has to chop wood!"

If you read it in The Optic it's so.

CURBING TREACHEROUS DRY CIMARRON RIVER

Folsom, N. M., June 24.—To avoid a repetition of the terrible flood of August, 1908, in which sixteen persons lost their lives and many thousands of dollars' worth of property destroyed, the citizens of Folsom are taking steps to straighten the course of the Dry Cimarron river and deepen and widen the channel in such a manner as will afford protection to the residents of that section.

The territorial government, the county commissioners of Union county, the Colorado and Southern Railroad company and various civic organizations of Folsom are uniting in the plan which will cost several thousand dollars to consummate, but will insure the city from any possibility of flood.

Considerable feeling exists at Folsom over the report published in certain Colorado and New Mexico papers to the effect that a similar flood to that of 1908 had washed away a portion of the city during the heavy rains last week, and a meeting was held at which these particular newspapers were flayed for the publication of the false report.

Of Interest to Farmers and Mechanics

Farmers and mechanics frequently meet with slight accidents and injuries which cause them much annoyance and loss of time. A cut or bruise may be cured in about one-third the time usually required by applying Chamberlain's Liniment as soon as the injury is received. This liniment is also valuable for sprains, soreness of the muscles and rheumatic pains. There is no danger of blood poisoning from an injury when Chamberlain's Liniment is applied before the parts become inflamed and swollen. For sale by all dealers.

125,000 ACRES CUT FROM JEMEZ FOREST

District Forester A. C. Ringland has returned to Albuquerque from Santa Fe, where he attended a meeting of a committee with Governor Curry in regard to the elimination of a tract of land from the Jemez reserve. As a result of the meeting 125,000 acres of land will be restored to the public range. Applications to have other tracts restored in various other ranges will be heard at a later date.

is served than all other beers. Budweiser is a friend of the traveler because it soothes fatigue and is a shield against ill-health.

The popular verdict of the people is the best evidence of Budweiser's superiority. More Budweiser is used in American Homes, Hotels, Clubs and Cafes, on Ocean and Lake Steamers than any other two brands of bottled beer combined.

CAUTION: To guard against deception and substitution, see that the corks are branded "Budweiser" and that the "Crown Caps" bear the A and Eagle trade-mark.
